HOOVER SHIP RIDES STORM

WAVES SWEEP BY GALES OVER MARYLAND; CABINS FLOODED

Hoover Remains On Deck Undisturbed As Seas Drench Ships Wants Conservative Inaugural Program

ABOARD THE U. S. S. MARYLAND, ENROUTE TO ANAPALA, Nov. 24.—The Maryland was riding a gale which attained a velocity of seventy miles an hour at one time this morning.

The good will ship bearing the President-elect Herbert Hoover to Latin American nations, rode the storm well.

Hoover apparently was undisturbed by the storm. At the peak of the gale's fury, waves broke over the clipper bow of the ship, throwing clouds of spray as high as the signal bridge. The forecastle and quarter decks were buried under water at times, four and five feet deep.

Captain Kimberly took charge of the bridge when the gale struck and he reduced the battleship's speed from seventeen to six knots.

The seas hammered a Voight Corsair seaplane on the quarter deck so badly, that Captain Kimberly changed course while the plane was moved to a place of safety. The Maryland reached the Gulf of Tehuantepec, famous for its immense ground swells, and a long rolling sea rose in a green cascade over the bows of the big battleship.

The portholes of President-elect Hoover's rooms were open and quantities of Pacific Ocean brine flooded his and many other rooms. Hoover was on deck at the time and no damage was done below.

Bluejackets rushed below and quickly mopped up the water. Last night, Hoover reiterated his desire for the most simple of inauguration ceremonies, next March.

It was indicated that the inaugural ball and the elaborate inauguration parade might be omitted.

"I wish no more elaborate ceremony than the most conservative ones of recent years," Hoover said, referring to the inaugurations of Presidents Wilson, Harding and Coolidge.

Hoover had busied himself during the day with preparations for his arrival at Anapala, Sunday and he continued to work on his Latin American addresses which, though brief, occupy much of his time and attention.

KING GEORGE BETTER

PROBE SHOOTING OF MAN WHO KIDNAPED HIS OWN DAUGHTER

Father Is Critically Wounded By Officer In Cleveland

CLEVELAND, Nov. 24.—

Whether the shooting of Virgil Timm, alleged abductor of his own seven year old daughter, when he attempted to avoid arrest, was justified was to be determined today by heads of the detective bureau and County Prosecutor Edward C. Stanton.

Timm was shot down when he refused to obey Detective Patrick McNeely's order to halt. He is near death in Lakeside Hospital.

Detectives rushed to the hospital early today, prepared to take a death bed statement from the man, but he rallied some, and no effort was made to question him.

Mrs. Mildred Timm, the injured man's wife, asked Cleveland police Monday to hunt for her husband and their daughter, Betty Jean, who she charged had been kidnapped from a Columbus school by the husband.

She expressed extreme sorrow over the result of her request today, but said that she could never live with her husband again.

During the night, when it appeared that her husband would die, she was permitted to spend nearly an hour with him alone. In the meantime the child over whom all the trouble originated, was in the care of policemen, crying intermittently for her mother, her father and Detective Sergeant Patrick Ryan, for whom she developed an immediate affection.

Sgt. Ryan and Detective McNeely went to get Timm late yesterday on a tip from a Euclid Avenue auto loan company that the man had been there.

Detectives went to the auto agency and found a friend of Timm's was transacting the deal. He was followed to a parking lot and Timm was waiting there. McNeely told Timm he was under arrest. Timm fled. McNeely fired two shots in the ground and then one that brought Timm down.

After the shooting, Timm revealed that his daughter was at the home of Edward Vogel, Sgt. Ryan got her and took her to the police women's bureau.

QUEEN MARY LEAVES PALACE; INDICATION RULER NOT SERIOUS

Pleurisy Develops; Prince Of Wales Not Recalled

LONDON, Nov. 24.—Queen Mary left Buckingham Palace today, and her departure was taken as a good sign that King George's condition was not considered critical.

The queen was understood to be attending a performance of the Royal Choral Society in Albert Hall this afternoon.

The king's fever was less and although pleurisy had set in, it was considered merely the ordinary course of his illness.

Late reports from Buckingham Palace, where the 63-year-old monarch of the British empire lies abed with fever, cold and a congested lung, said royal physicians were satisfied with the king's condition.

The Buckingham Palace spokesman told the press at 5:30 a. m.: "The king passed a quiet and comfortable night."

The attention of the far-flung peoples of the British empire was centered on the gray historic building where King George is ill.

The last official bulletin from Buckingham Palace was flashed around the world. It came last night and said:

"The king had a quieter day. His temperature is lower and there is no further extension of the chief in his lung."

(Signed) Sir Stanley Hewett, Lord Dawson, of Penn.

Unpleasant, occasioned by the king's illness, stirred the empire's millions deeply and attention was focused on the remote regions of South Africa where Edward, Prince of Wales and heir presumptive to the British empire, is hunting big game.

Although the government had considered sending a special dispatch to the Prince of Wales, notifying him of his father's illness, it was later decided to send word by regular telegraphic channels.

Dispatches to the United Press at Johannesburg, South Africa, said the government was unable to state whether information of his father's illness had reached the prince or whether his plans would be changed. There would be no difficulty in a quick return journey for the prince it was said, should the necessity arise.

The Duke of Gloucester is also hunting in Africa, and Prince George, fourth son of the king, is on board the H. M. S. Durban, now in Bermuda.

The Duke of York, second in line of family succession to the Prince of Wales, was at Buckingham Palace. He had been recalled from Northampton and he remained in close contact with Sir Stanley Hewett, surgeon and apothecary to the king.

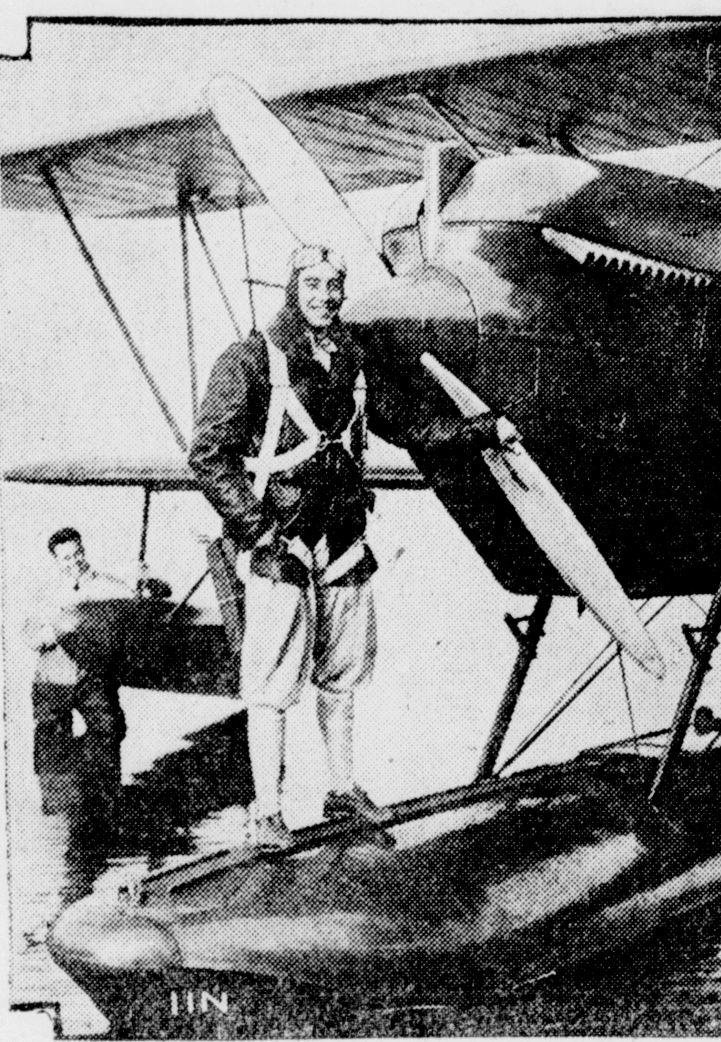

The routine at Buckingham Palace, is only slightly upset. The royal householders did not seem unduly anxious.

DAR-ES-SALAAM, Tanganyika Colony, East Africa, Nov. 24.—The prince of Wales thus far has not been recalled from his hunting trip to go to the bedside of his father, King George, who is ill in London.

The prince is on a shooting expedition in the Dorenda district, two days' journey from Dodoma.

The king is lying in the United Press today that the Union of South Africa air force was in readiness to respond immediately if there is any intimation that planes would be needed to rush the Prince of Wales to England.

POSTPONES SECOND LEG OF FLIGHT

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Nov. 24.—Lieut. Benjamin Mendez, Colombian flier, definitely decided early today to postpone the second leg of his good will flight to Bogota until tomorrow.

SECOND GALE KILLS NINE IN ENGLAND; SHIPS IN DISTRESS

Storms Cause Heavy Damage In Widely Separated Places

By UNITED PRESS
Hurricane, typhoon and gale struck in widely separated sections of the world today, bringing death and widespread havoc.

The British Isles, hardly recovered from the gales of last week which took more than 100 lives and caused property damage running into many millions, was swept by a storm of even stronger intensity yesterday and winds raged through cities tearing roofs from houses and killing nine people.

Large areas in Scotland were flooded as heavy rains swelled mountain streams to raging torrents, and steamers were buffeted by the gale.

Eleven of the crew of the German steamship Herrenwijk still were missing as rescue ships picked up fifteen of her crew and cruised through the wreckage in rough seas searching for traces of the lost men.

A severe typhoon swung across the southern section of the Philippine Islands and the cruiser Niemba, going to aid the stranded Japanese ship Saka Maru, was hard hit. No word was heard from the Japanese ship, after the typhoon broke.

A severe hurricane was reported in three Mexican states in United Press dispatches from Vera Cruz.

CAPETOWN, South Africa, Nov. 24.—The steamer Cariboo was reported sinking thirty-five miles southwest of East London today. The report said the crew had been saved, but that Captain Mitchell remained on board the vessel.

It was reported that the steamship Windsor Castle had picked up the crew after the latter had abandoned the Cariboo.

Apparently the Windsor Castle was standing by hoping to save Captain Mitchell.

The Cariboo left East London, Friday night, after loading cargo for the United States encountering heavy seas.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—The Daily Mail's Amsterdam correspondent reported that the Greek steamship Eugenia, 4600 tons, had been driven ashore in heavy gales off Nieuwedich, Holland. The report said the Eugenia, with a crew of twenty-five or thirty, was mostly British, was laying over in a dangerous position.

A lifeboat and a tug were making sturdy efforts to rescue the crew.

PORTSMOUTH, England, Nov. 24.—The Russian oil tanker Neftezyndak sent an SOS today saying that she was in distress off St. Catherine's point with her steering gear damaged. Two tugs were requested by the tanker.

BARBERTON, O., Nov. 24.—The second fatality in the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company explosion occurred last night when Paul Underwood, 42, Akron, died. He was one of eight men injured.

Harold Shaw, 31, Wadsworth, died yesterday.

BANDITS SOUGHT
COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 24.—Police today were searching for two Negro bandits, one of whom shot and wounded D. E. Bailey, a grocer, when the latter refused to turn over the contents of his cash register. Bailey will recover. The shooting occurred last night.

WOMEN INJURED
LANCASTER, O., Nov. 24.—Three Columbus women were injured when two automobiles collided here last night.

COMMUNITY CHEST CAMPAIGN PASSES HALF-WAY MARK FRIDAY

Workers Optimistic Of Success By Tuesday; Subscriptions From 410 People; Small Donations Are Urged

Xenia's first annual Community Chest campaign for $10,000 has passed the halfway mark.

With the campaign $4,288.25 away from its quota of $10,000, T. H. Zell, general chairman, declared Saturday that the status of the drive met with "reasonable expectations of the officials."

Friday's report added ninety-eight new subscribers for a total of $1,276.75 to the previous total of $3,995, bringing the grand total pledged or collected to $5,371.75, more than half the quota. This amount represents the subscriptions of 410 people.

Next Tuesday is the final day of solicitation but the enthusiasm of the workers has not been dampened. On the contrary solicitors are exerting every effort to reach the goal and are optimistic of success.

No great movement such as the Community Chest Fund campaign could hope to succeed without an unusually large number of contributors which their face may seem small, chest officials point out.

Indeed, the giving of all the money asked for such a purpose by a mere handful of wealthy men would not constitute a real success at all, it is asserted.

"It would do nothing to arouse and maintain that humane, community spirit, the existence of which is more important in the long run, than the success of any given campaign for funds," Chairman Zell declared Saturday.

"The person of small means who can and does give $5, $10 or $25 to such a cause, through a feeling of genuine sympathy for the unfortunate, ranks side by side, in every essential of civic duty in such matters, with the man of wealth who can and does give many hundreds. The virtue of the widow's mite is as real today as it was in Bible times.

There are many men and women in the city who can give these smaller sums, and who would make a great mistake to withhold them through a feeling that they are too small to be of any importance. "It is important to keep our Community Chest work on the broadest possible basis of popular interest. And, incidentally, it is of supreme importance to each one of us individually that we keep ourselves in touch with the spirit of human kindness which will not pass by on the other side" when there are those who need our aid."

Plans for a final intensive effort to put Xenia's Community Chest campaign for $10,000 "over the top" will be outlined at a special meeting of the chest board of directors at City Hall at 10 o'clock Monday morning, T. H. Zell, general chairman, announced. Although interest is not abating and the drive, it is planned by the directors to hold a final conference, preparatory to making a final appeal for the remaining money needed to fill the chest.

GALES SPREAD DEATH AND DISASTER

HOOVER SHIP RIDES STORM WAVES SWEEP BY GALES OVER MARYLAND; CABINS FLOODED

Hoover Remains On Deck Undisturbed As Seas Drench Ships Wants Conservative Inaugural Program

ABOARD THE U. S. S. MARYLAND, ENROUTE TO ANAPALA, Nov. 24.—The Maryland was riding a gale which attained a velocity of twenty miles an hour at one time this morning.

The good will ship bearing the President-elect Herbert Hoover to Latin American nations, rode the storm well. Hoover apparently was undisturbed by the storm.

At the peak of the gale's fury, waves broke over the clipper bow of the ship, throwing clouds of spray as high as the signal bridge. The forecabin and quarter decks were buried under water at times, four and five feet deep.

Captain Kimberly took charge of the bridge when the gale struck and he reduced the battleship's speed from seventeen to six knots. The seas hammered a Voight Corsair seaplane on the quarter deck so badly, that Captain Kimberly changed course while the plane was moved to a place of safety.

The Maryland reached the Gulf of Tehuantepec, famous for its immense ground swells, and a long rolling sea rose in a green cascade over the bows of the big battleship.

The portholes of President-elect Hoover's rooms were open and quantities of Pacific Ocean brine flooded his and many other rooms. Hoover was on deck at the time and no damage was done below. Bluejackets rushed below and quickly mopped up the water.

Last night, Hoover reiterated his desire for the most simple of inauguration ceremonies, next March. It was indicated that the inaugural ball and the elaborate inauguration parade might be omitted.

"I wish no more elaborate ceremony than the most conservative ones of recent years," Hoover said, referring to the inaugurations of Presidents Wilson, Harding and Coolidge.

Hoover had busied himself during the day with preparations for his arrival at Anapala, Sunday and he continued to work on his Latin American addresses which, though brief, occupy much of his time and attention.

PROBE SHOOTING OF MAN WHO KIDNAPED HIS OWN DAUGHTER

Father Is Critically Wounded By Officer In Cleveland

CLEVELAND, Nov. 24.—Whether the shooting of Virgil Timm, alleged abductor of his own seven year old daughter, when he attempted to avoid arrest, was justified was to be determined today by heads of the detective bureau and County Prosecutor Edward C. Stanton.

Timm was shot down when he refused to obey Detective Patrick McNeely's order to halt. He is near death in Lakeside Hospital.

Detectives rushed to the hospital early today, prepared to take a death bed statement from the man, but he rallied some, and no effort was made to question him.

Mrs. Mildred Timm, the injured man's wife, asked Cleveland police Monday to hunt for her husband and their daughter, Betty Jean, who she charged had been kidnapped from a Columbus school by the husband.

She expressed extreme sorrow over the result of her request today, but said that she could never live with her husband again.

During the night, when it appeared that her husband would die, she was permitted to spend nearly an hour with him alone.

In the meantime the child over whom all the trouble originated, was in the care of policemen, crying intermittently for her mother, her father and Detective Sergeant Patrick Ryan, for whom she developed an immediate affection.

Sergeant Ryan and Detective McNeely were sent to get Timm late yesterday on a tip from a Euclid Avenue auto loan company that the man had been there.

Detectives went to the auto agency and found a friend of Timm's was transacting the deal. He was followed to a parking lot and Timm was waiting there. McNeely told Timm he was under arrest. Timm fled. McNeely fired two shots in the ground and then one more that brought Timm down.

After the shooting, Timm revealed that his daughter was at the home of Edward Vogel. Sergeant Ryan got her and took her to the police women's bureau.

The last official bulletin from Buckingham Palace was flashed around the world. It came last night and said:

"The king had a quieter day. His temperature is lower and there is no further extension of the mischief in his lung."

(Signed) Sir Stanley Hewitt, Lord Dawson, of Penn.

Uneasiness, occasioned by the king's illness, stirred the empire's millions deeply and attention was focused on the remote regions of South Africa where Edward, Prince of Wales and heir presumptive to the British empire, is hunting big game.

Although the government had considered sending a special dispatch to the Prince of Wales, notifying him of his father's illness, it was later decided to send word by regular telegraphic channels.

Dispatches to the United Press at Johannesburg, South Africa, said the government was unable to state whether information of his father's illness had reached the prince or whether his plans would be changed. There would be no difficulty in a quick return journey for the prince it was said, should the necessity arise.

The Duke of Gloucester is also hunting in Africa, and Prince George, fourth son of the king, is stationed on board the H. M. S. Durban, now in Bermuda.

The Duke of York, second in line of family succession to the Prince of Wales, was at Buckingham Palace. He had been recalled from Northampton and he remained in close contact with Sir Stanley Hewitt, surgeon and a diphtheria expert.

The king is lying in a soundproof chamber with two nurses in constant attendance.

The routine at Buckingham Palace, is only slightly upset. The royal householders did not seem unduly anxious.

COMMUNITY CHEST CAMPAIGN PASSES HALF-WAY MARK FRIDAY

Workers Optimistic Of Success By Tuesday; Subscriptions From 410 People; Small Donations Are Urged

Xenia's first annual Community Chest campaign for $10,000 has passed the halfway mark.

With the campaign $4,628.25 away from its quota of $10,000, T. H. Zell, general chairman, declared Saturday that the status of the drive met with "reasonable expectations of the officials."

Friday's report added ninety-eight new subscribers for a total of $1,376.75 to the previous total of $3,251.50, bringing the grand total pledged or collected to $4,628.25, more than half the quota. This amount represents the subscriptions of 410 people.

Next Tuesday is the final day of solicitation but the enthusiasm wealthy who can and does give many hundreds. The virtue of the widow's mite is as real today as it was in Bible times.

"There are many men and women in the city who can give these smaller sums, and who would make a great mistake to withhold them through a feeling that they are too small to be of any importance. It is important to keep our Community Chest work on the popular basis of popular interest. And, incidentally, it is of supreme importance to each one of us individually that we keep ourselves in touch with the spirit of human kindness which will not pass by on the other side when there are those who need our aid."

Plans for a final intensive effort to put Xenia's Community Chest campaign for $10,000 "over the top" will be outlined at a special meeting of the executive board of directors at City Hall at 10 o'clock Monday morning. T. H. Zell, general chairman, announced. Although interest is not abating and there has been no pronounced lull in the drive, it is planned by the directors to hold a final conference, preparatory to making a final appeal for the remaining money needed to fill the chest.

of the workers has not been dampened. On the contrary solicitors are exerting every effort to reach the goal and are optimistic of success.

No great movement such as the Community Chest Fund campaign could hope to succeed without an unusually large number of contributions which on their face may seem small, chest officials point out.

Indeed, the giving of all the money asked for such a purpose by a mere handful of wealthy men would not constitute a real success at all, it is asserted.

"It would do nothing to arouse and maintain that humane, community spirit, the existence of which is more important in the long run, than the success of any given campaign for funds," Chairman Zell declared Saturday.

"The person of small means who can and does give $5, $10 or $25 to such a cause, through a feeling of genuine sympathy for the unfortunate, ranks side by side, in every essential of civic duty in such matters, with the man of

FUNERAL OF THOMAS FORTUNE RYAN WILL BE HELD ON MONDAY

Financier Was One Of Richest Men In America

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—Funeral services for Thomas Fortune Ryan, 77, one of America's leading tycoons, who died yesterday at his home, 858 Fifth Ave., of complications caused by gall bladder inflammation, will be held Monday morning, with solemn high mass of requiem at the Church of St. Jean Baptiste in Upper Lexington Ave.

This church was largely built through money contributed by Mr. Ryan, one of the country's wealthiest men. The financier left a fortune estimated from 300 millions to 500 millions. He was a principal stockholder in the Guaranty Trust Co., and is said to have kept $40,000,000 cash on deposit constantly.

He spent his boyhood in the mountains of Virginia. He later clerked in a Baltimore dry goods store and retained a reputation of secrecy in amassing his wealth. At one time the United Capitalization of the street railways and public utility corporations and the Ryan group controlled amounted to one and a half billion dollars. In addition, Mr. Ryan was interested in the reorganization of various railways in Ohio and development of coal properties in Ohio and West Virginia.

The first Mrs. Ryan was made a countess by Pope Pius in 1907. She died in 1914. By her Ryan had five sons. He was married the second time, to Mrs. Cornelia C. Cuyler in 1917. After his second marriage he established his residence in Washington.

SHIP DISASTER PROBES TURN ATTENTION TO CONSTRUCTION

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—Steel and sticks that made up the sunken liner Vestris crowded human beings out of the spotlight today in the government's two investigations into the causes of the disaster.

Bulkheads and bolts, ports and pipes will engage the attention of United States Commissioner Francis O'Neill and commerce department agents until the two hearings reconvene Monday morning.

O'Neill is sitting at the hearing started by Federal Attorney Charles H. Tuttle and the commerce department officials are conducting an investigation in behalf of the steamboat inspection service.

O'Neill and Tuttle are seeking to ascertain if criminal prosecution is warranted and the other inquiry is looking into the inspection which was made by federal agents, who declared the Vestris seaworthy before she sailed away on the voyage that caused the loss of 114 lives.

It is the first time the human equation has been almost altogether eliminated from the hearings. Later the investigators will return to the question of alleged negligence and incompetency.

DR. FRANK W. OGAN, JAMESTOWN MAYOR, DIES THERE FRIDAY

Well-Known Physician Ill Four Weeks; Was Bank Officer

Dr. Frank W. Ogan, 68, mayor of Jamestown and one of the most prominent physicians in eastern Greene County, passed away at his home in Jamestown at 5 o'clock Friday afternoon.

Dr. Ogan had been in poor health for some time and became bedfast about four weeks ago. His condition showed gradual improvement and his recovery had seemed almost certain until several days ago when he suffered a relapse from which he failed to rally. Death is believed to have been due to cancer of the liver.

Dr. Ogan was born three miles south of Jamestown December 18, 1859, the son of Marshall and Mahala Ogan, and would have been sixty-nine years of age next month. He received his education in a rural school and later graduated from the College of Medicine at Cincinnati. He practiced pharmacy for a time before beginning the practice of medicine.

Dr. Ogan had a widespread practice of medicine in the eastern part of Greene County for many years and enjoyed a wide acquaintance in Jamestown.

At the time of his death he was serving his second term of two years as mayor of the village. He was vice president of the People's Bank at Jamestown for twelve years and was active in Masonic circles for some time, serving as secretary of the Masonic Lodge.

During the World War Dr. Ogan was a member of the board of county examiners and also served as president of the Greene County Chapter of the Red Cross during that period. He was scribe of Grace Encampment, a branch of the Odd Fellows order, was a member of the Greene County Medical Society and acted as surgeon on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad for many years. He was also a member of the United Presbyterian Church and of the United States Pension Board.

Dr. Ogan was a life-long resident of Greene County, having resided in the vicinity of Jamestown virtually his entire life.

Surviving besides his widow, Mrs. Margaret Ogan, is one son, Alfred, Franklin, O.; one brother, Salathiel, Springfield; and one sister, Mrs. Elvira Carpenter, Jamestown. Another brother, Dr. Ambrose Ogan, Blanchester, O., died several months ago.

Funeral services will be conducted at the residence at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon in charge of the Rev. L. L. Gray, pastor of the United Presbyterian Church. Interment will be made in the Jamestown Cemetery.

BOARD OF CLEMENCY HEARS ARGUMENTS FOR RUDNER PAROLE

Widely Divergent Pictures Painted By Counsel

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 24.—Two widely divergent pictures of Ben Rudner, of Massillon, who is serving life in the state penitentiary for his part in the murder of Don R. Mellett, Canton editor, in July, 1926, were painted when the board of clemency heard arguments on a petition presented to Governor Donahey late yesterday, asking executive clemency for Rudner.

Attorney K. W. Powell, Youngstown, successfully defended former Police Chief Lenzel of Canton in his second trial in connection with the same murder, pictured Rudner as "an affable man, whose kind heartedness has been responsible for most of the trouble in his life."

Prosecutor Henry Harter, Jr., of Canton, declared "there are few men within the walls of Ohio penitentiary more dangerous than Ben Rudner."

Rudner said Rudner was given the task of organizing the gang to be used in the Mellett case.

"Rudner should have been convicted of murder in the first degree and sent to the electric chair," Harter told the board.

Attorneys for Rudner denied there was any evidence introduced at the trials of any of the Mellett defendants to show that Rudner was in on the plot against Mellett. They claimed also that Rudner, if the law on conspiracy was properly outlined, would not be guilty of murder even though he had been in on the conspiracy to "beat up" Mellett, because the common purpose or original design of the conspiracy had not been followed out.

Attorney Powell introduced as evidence a "confession" made by Pat McDermott several months after he was confined to the pen, absolving Rudner.

Powell claimed that Floyd Streitberger, former Canton policeman also serving life for his part in the Mellett slaying, said in the presence of Deputy Warden Woodward that Rudner had no part in the conspiracy. Powell also told the board that Louis Mazer, another of the convicted conspirators, had absolved Rudner.

Prosecutor Harter pointed out that Rudner's attorneys had withdrawn the motion for a new trial they filed in the court of appeals after his conviction. He also pointed to the difficulty, if not the impossibility of getting all of the state's witnesses together again for a new trial after the lapse of time. Max Rudner, father of the convicted slayer, made an appeal for clemency for his son.

The clemency board will report its findings to Governor Donahey.

SECOND GALE KILLS NINE IN ENGLAND; SHIPS IN DISTRESS

Storms Cause Heavy Damage In Widely Separated Places

By UNITED PRESS

Hurricane, typhoon and gale struck in widely separated sections of the world today, bringing death and widespread havoc.

The British Isles, hardly recovered from the gales of last week which took more than 100 lives and caused property damage running into many millions, was swept by a storm of even stronger intensity yesterday and winds raged through cities tearing roofs from houses and killing nine people.

Large areas in Scotland were flooded as heavy rains swelled mountain streams to raging torrents, and steamers were buffeted by the gale.

Eleven of the crew of the German steamship Herrenwijk still were missing as rescue ships picked up fifteen of her crew and cruised through the wreckage in rough seas searching for traces of the lost men.

A severe typhoon swung across the southern section of the Philippines Islands and the cruiser Menajalis, going to aid the stranded Japanese ship Saka Maru, was hard hit. No word was heard from the Japanese ship, after the typhoon broke.

A severe hurricane was reported in three Mexican states in United Press dispatches from Vera Cruz.

CAPTOWN, SOUTH AFRICA, NOV. 24.—The steamer Cariboo was reported sinking thirty-five miles southwest of East London today. The report said the crew had been saved, but that Captain Mitchell remained on board the vessel.

It was reported that the steamship Windsor Castle had picked up the crew after the latter had abandoned the Cariboo.

Apparently the Windsor Castle was standing by hoping to save Captain Mitchell.

The Cariboo left East London, Friday night, after loading cargo for the United States encountering heavy seas.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

OUR TEACHER—Thus saith the Lord, thy Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel; I am the Lord thy God which teacheth thee to profit, which leadeth thee by the way that thou shouldst go.—Isa. 48:17.

HOOVER AND EUROPEAN PROPAGANDA

President-elect Hoover on his friendship visit to South America will find that the United States must solve two problems to reclaim the friendship of the Latin nations. They are: First—European propaganda, particularly that of Spain, Italy and England, which has fostered a distrust of the United States in South America in order to win the Latin American trade.

Second—The Latin suspicion of all our diplomatic moves, based on the fact that, being a talkative and excitable people, they cannot accept as frankness our taciturn approach to international problems.

This is the situation as it is pictured in the North American Review by Dr. L. L. Bernard, distinguished sociologist of Cornell university, recently returned from a year's first-hand study of the southern continent and its people.

"The most pessimistic fears of the South Americans regarding us find much encouragement from European propagandists of all nations," says Dr. Bernard. "Some of their jealousy and envy of our growth and power is native, but I believe much more of it has been skillfully fostered by the Europeans."

Spain naturally holds South American interest and sympathy through the blood-tie, he points out. But Italy, with its present heavy flow of emigrants into the southern continent, and England, with a heavy investment in commerce and industry, are taking advantage of every opportunity to strengthen their own trade relations by discrediting the United States in subtle ways, he says.

The recent appeal of Mussolini for the South Americans to look to the Latin nations of Europe as their natural protectors is an excellent illustration of how little pleasure he and his people take in the Monroe Doctrine.

One of our greatest possible diplomatic assets in Latin America would be to explain carefully to the world every political step we take in intra-American affairs. The Latins simply do not understand silence, it disconcerts them and arouses their suspicions.

When the United States government feels that its policies in Central America and elsewhere are justified by necessity, it would do well to state its reasons meticulously. The Latins are fundamentally a very frank people. If we speak out frankly about our motives and if the speech has the ring of truth, there should be little to fear.

WHY BLAME THE CAT?

In the good old days when grandma and grandpa were young, it was considered an ill-omen to have a black cat cross one's path. Doubtless many of the dear old folk would exclaim, "I told you so," if they heard the story of John Coffey, reported from Muskogee, Okla.

Apparently the black cat of this tale crossed Farmer Coffey's path at a very inopportune moment. The farmer, in attempting to light his pipe, broke the match, which dropped into a kerosene can. An unfortunate accident for the cat. The explosion that came instantaneously ignited the poor feline and it scampered frantically for the barn, where it was consumed by flames along with the building and the hay stored in it.

"A black cat—I told you so" . . . yes, but why blame it on the cat? Why have an open can of kerosene standing about and why light a match near such a can? Common sense dictates that all inflammable and explosive liquids should be kept in tightly closed metal containers and in a safe place. The black cat from his happy hunting grounds knows they are dangerous, and The National Board of Fire Underwriters supplies figures showing that the annual fire loss from careless handling of petroleum and its products was over $14,000,000 in 1926.

The Way of the World

By GROVE PATTERSON

THE GOOD OLD DAYS

You have heard of the man who wants all automobiles demolished. He longs for the horse and buggy days.

Poor fellow. He forgets the horse and buggy era was the time of 12 and 13-hour schedules for factory employes, working seven days a week. He forgets that machine production is shortening the working day.

CAN'T PREDICT

No one knows how short the working day will become. A Chicagoan thinks many of us will live to see a three-hour period of daily toil. That seems impossible, but who dare say it is? Yesterday's impossibilities are today's realities.

FREE TIME

With more leisure will come greater opportunity for individual improvement. There should be time for those who aspire to write to study and practice. Time for those who admire musical talent to develop themselves. Time for more of us to help our handicapped friends.

AHEAD

When ancient Athens was in flower some of the Athenians produced great works of art. But well rounded lives were lacking. The upper classes had no genuine interest in the workingman, save as a slave. Philanthropy was starved.

Greater things are ahead of the world than any of the seven wonders of the past. And the machine will be the instrument of achievement.

PERSONALITY'S WORTH

The man with the strong and attractive personality is the one who gets ahead in the engineering profession. A survey by an engineering society shows that technical knowledge plays a fifteen per cent role in success. The other eighty-five per cent is due to personality.

Then how develop personality? Well, how do you think?

The Diary

of a

New Yorker

By WALTER WINCHELL

NEW YORK.—A column or so ago Charles Wagner, poet, contributed a verse called "Subway Flirtation," in which he told of a charmer with whom he flirted under ground, and wondered if she would see the poem here—and if she did he would be happy. He was too shy to speak with her, it seems, although "she gave me the sign," ran a line.

Well, this is to urge Mr. Wagner to call for his pash, which is cluttering up this virgin desk, or better still, we wish he would immediately forward a self-addressed envelope for several women have made reply, urging us to forward their missives to Mr. Wagner, who, it appears, is their weakness now.

THEORY

To hear some of the so-called wisenheimers table-talk it with the passing of the gambler, Arnold Rothstein, who was spectacularly shot, the gaming houses in New York will perish. "He was the heart of the racket," said one Mainstemmer. "Who else is going to put up the big bait? When he went, so went the big dough."

But that's just so much whoopee. Gambling will continue, probably, on just as big a scale. There is always "new" money to be had, and, of course, there is always another Wallingford on the scene who thinks he knows "all the answers."

THE BIG OPTIMIST!

Somewhere she waits, strong in belief,
Your soul in her firm white hands.
Thank well the gods when she comes to you—
The Woman Who Understands
—Everad J. Appleton, via R.

INCIDENTALLY

Arnold Rothstein's method of hounding his creditors will not be across when they broke their promises again is being discussed. "When a guy would say that Rothstein had summoned him to his office, where we all know you went through hell listening to him grumble, we always would say: 'Oh! So you're going up to sit in the electric chair, eh?'"

Such little things will break our hearts
An angry word, a kiss denied,
A door slammed loudly and our dreams

I broke my heart because you spoke
Of love and lovers, bitterly
Because you laughed to scorn
My dreams
Of ecstasy.

Ah, well my heart is mended now
The bits are held with tape and glue
You'll never guess that once I cried
All night for you . . .
—Mimi Phillips.

SLANGUAGE

We only heard the expression yesterday. Maybe we haven't been around much. However, when a guy's "hat is blown off" it is underworded for scaring an antagonist. The banditti, in fewer words, who want to frighten an enemy or take him for a sort of "ride," chirp: "Let's blow his hat off." The victim is trailed, and just when he least expects it his hat (most times) is knocked from his dome, and when he picks the lid up he discovers the bullet holes. Then if he doesn't drop dead from heart failure he worries himself to a yawning grave.

Nice, no?

TEAM WORK

"Boy, what kinda seegar is dat you is smoking?"
"Nigger, dat's a quarter seegar."
"Quarter nothing. You never pay no two bits for a seegar."
"I didn't say nothing about dat. De boss he smokes three-quarters and I smoke a quarter."

LET HIM LOOSE

He was one of the fire-and-brimstone type, and he was giving the audience a few home truths. "Yes, my friends," he said, "although you are all above sin, each one of you must beware of the Demon. The Demon is chained to the wall, waiting to jump out and catch you. If you give him the slightest chance he'll stretch out his hand in front and grab you! Or he'll stretch out to the right and grab you! Or he'll stretch out to the left and grab you! And he'll even stretch out behind and grab you." This was a little too much for a man seated in the middle row of seats, and rising to his feet he shouted: "Well, the thing might as well be loose."

SHARP RETORT

It was a very hot day and the guide in the crowded bus had just about reached the end of his tether. But he had his living to earn. Suddenly he noticed they were passing a newly erected monument. "On your right," he shouted, pointing with his arm, "on your right you see a statue unveiled last week to a noble cause." "And what does it stand for?" asked a troublesome old gentleman. "Because it would look silly lying down," snapped the guide.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—The congressional atmosphere will not be as pleasant as usual when our national legislature meets next month. Things have been said and done during the just-concluded campaign that will not be forgotten or forgiven in a hurry. Ordinary campaign talk is not taken at all seriously in professional political circles.

This time, as we all know, it has been very personal. A pair of scrappers, whose business is fighting, can mix it like sixty in the ring and stay good friends, provided they both are fair. But it means genuine ill-feeling if they get to gouging, biting and hitting low.

The politician, consider, mutual. That this campaign has been foul.

There is no mistake about it—many a public man has revealed himself, in the last few months, as an altogether different type of individual from what the country had always supposed him to be—and anything but a better type.

Not alone has it been an intolerant campaign. It has been ungentlemanly. A candidate for office, and his friends, must expect him to be criticized on account of his political views, but he and his supporters are entitled to resent an attack which takes the form of abuse, like calling him a "nitwit."

Terms such as "nitwit"—only a good deal worse—have been flying right and left since midsummer, and a lot of hide has been taken off by them.

Victims of all this loss of civility are not coming back to Washington in December in a frame of mind to kiss and make up with those who were responsible for it. Perfunctory congratulations and thanks for same, were generally exchanged, as usual, following election, but this was one of the times when mighty little sincerity went into them. Indeed, there probably was less of it than ever before since Hayes and Tilden days.

Another thing that puts an extra strain on former amiable relationships was the volume of boasting on both sides since the Kansas City and Houston conventions. A bolter always makes himself exceedingly unpopular with members of the party he deserts. As stand-pat politicians regard it, it amounts to treason. There is no make-believe about the anger it arouses in their breasts.

A great many Republicans literally hate Senator Norris, for instance, out and out. A great many Democrats equally hate Senator Simmons.

Lawmakers on both sides of the political fence will arrive in the capital in winter's work still simmering from the bitterest conflict of their generation.

There are bound to be recriminations among them. Inter-party kindnesses of many years' standing seem certain to be disrupted on every hand. It has been a peculiarly mean encounter and real sensibilities have been lacerated the worst way.

Effect winners are not a bit likely to be generous. The losers are equally unlikely to accept defeat gracefully. It was a vicious affair between them—not a scientific exhibition. It promises to be a long while before the wounds, mutually inflicted, heal.

Understanding People

By CHARLES B. DRISCOLL

If we could understand each other better, we could get along with humanity. In fact, understanding generally increases our liking for people. I remember once conceiving a violent dislike for a young man whom I met in the course of a day's work. A mutual friend afterward invited me to luncheon, and mentioned that the young man I had disliked would be there also. I said I'd would be there also, because the sight of the disliked young man would make me unhappy. My friend gently persuaded me. I became better acquainted with the fellow for whom I had conceived an aversion, and eventually, he became one of my best friends. I had disliked him because I hadn't understood him.

A great deal of attention is being given, these days, to analyzing ourselves and our friends. The rise of psychoanalysis and imitation psychoanalysis into popular favor has brought with it a renewed popular interest in human beings. We are all interested in personalities as never before. Especially in our own personalities. The desire for self-analysis has become a craze.

I am much interested in a new book, "Behind Your Front," by James Oppenheim. It is an attempt to further popularize self-analysis by making it easy for the average reader to analyze himself and his friends with the aid of tables, diagrams, pictures and short, concise descriptions. Perhaps classify is a better word than analyze in this case. Analysis is a serious understanding, but anyone, with a good set of hints and primary principles, can go far toward classifying and labeling himself and his friends.

Are you an extravert or an introvert? Not that you absolutely have to be either. You may be a combination of the two, and probably are. But you may be more of one and less of the other. As soon as you divide humanity into two classes, you naturally want to know in which class you belong. "Behind Your Front" undertakes to help you decide whether you're an extravert, as was Theodore Roosevelt, or an introvert, as was Edgar Allen Poe.

Knowing people, you come to like them, or, at the worst, to tolerate them and be forbearing toward characteristics that are unlike your own.

STICK TO REDUCING DIET UNTIL FOOD TASTES CHANGE

Backslidings.

"I once lost 47 pounds by Peter-sizing, but am ashamed to say I have gained back 21 pounds. Am starting all over again and am going to lose at least 50 pounds." "MRS. E."

You evidently went back to the same food habits you had before you reduced, Mrs. E., or you would not have gained. I cannot emphasize strongly enough sticking to the reducing diet long enough to change the food tastes. If you persist, you can learn to really prefer some fruit rather than pies, cakes, puddings or ice cream for dessert, to feel no sense of loss when no bread is taken with a full meal, to really like food better without a lot of rich gravies and sauces, etc., and to wonder how you ever cared so much about candy.

acquiring such food tastes will automatically cut out 500 to 1000 calories a day. After you have acquired these habits, you can cease counting your calories, although it's fun to do this anyway.

Try to get at least two miles of brisk walking every day and five to ten minutes of setting-up exercises. These exercises and the walk, as well as the new food habits, are things you should keep up for the rest of your life.

Have you our pamphlet on reducing and gaining? If not, our serve the column rules and it will be sent you. Ask also for the article on the Atonic Abdominal Wall.

Dilatation of the Heart
"Can dilatation of the heart be cured, are tobacco and whiskey key used every day bad for one so afflicted? I do not use the tobacco or whiskey—MRS. R."

A real dilatation of the heart is serious and is usually the result of what we know as decompensation in a heart that is already deranged. The heart has been carrying on under its handicap, but some extra strain or exertion has occurred so that its weakened fibres have pulled out, as it were. This dilatation occasionally occurs in healthy hearts under excessive athletic strain.

The patient has to have medication and be at complete rest. I rather imagine your husband (if he is able to take whiskey and tobacco) has what is known as a hypertrophied or enlarged heart. This may arise if there is any trouble in the heart valve or the heart muscles and the heart has to work harder than normal for a long period. Some physicians believe that tiny doses of alcohol are beneficial in heart diseases. Others do not hold with this at all. Tobacco is a poison, even in moderation for some, and only when used excessively in others, and is bad in any condition. However, if a patient has become tolerant of its poison, some doctors advise its continuance in small amounts rather than an abrupt break-off.

H.—If you can, go to an orthopedic surgeon. He will give you some exercises and some treatments to strengthen your leg which has been disabled by infantile paralysis. The fact that it is much better now than it used to be probably shows it is capable of further improvement.

YOUNG FOLKS SUFFER KEENLY IN "CALF LOVE" AFFAIRS

Young people's troubles often seem trivial to their elders. They are anything but that to the youngsters, however. Especially their love troubles. One can suffer keenly in these so-called "calf love" affairs, and in after years one looks back with smiles and sighs to the time that looks so sweet and happy now, but caused much anguish then. Are the troubles of later years any more serious? One marriage brings many problems, some serious, some less so. A second marriage complicates things considerably. I often think takes considerable courage to make a second venture, especially where there are children.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am only 30 now, and for nine years I have been married to a man that I have come to hate because of his inhuman treatment of my little son by my former marriage. We have a son who is eight years old, and his father has spoiled him so that no one likes him, while the older boy is so mistreated that he is ready to cry at every little thing. Then, my husband's mother had made my home a living hell from her bossing, and has taken over the complete management of everything. I work in our office every day and receive nothing for it. I haven't even a comfortable place to rest when I get home at night. Mrs. Lee, I am a home-loving person and would give anything for a nice little home where I could have harmony. I love art and all the things that go to make a real home. I often wonder why people who crave such things, so can't have just a few of them. I have tried to get employment in other offices, but my husband is so well known that they all tell me that I don't need to work and won't hire me. I am getting desperate and must do something soon. Can you not suggest something?"

"Bad Loser," I read your letter and surely felt sorry for you. But you must take heart, for surely you will meet someone some day who will appreciate you. SMILING."

Could you manage to send your older boy away to school? It would be much better for him than to stay where he is misunderstood and ill-treated. Then, too, it would remove one source of jealousy and ill-feeling. As you are at work all day it seems an ideal arrangement that your mother-in-law should manage the house and look after the children, but a course, after all, to rest and should really be head of the house. No woman likes to turn over the management of her home to anyone, no matter how competent. You should certainly be paid for your work at the office, for the business justifies it, or at least have some chance to handle money so that you could have some of the things you yearn for. I cannot advise you to leave home, as then your younger boy might be utterly spoiled. If you say is bitter for your work, try to get about with as little friction as possible, and things may work out better in the future. I hope so. It's a long lane that has no turning, you know.

A Reader Brown Eyes: Your fiancé is a bit old for you, but not too old if you love one another. If he shows signs of loving you less, however, why would you want to hold him? Some men—most are just as sincere in their love as women, and happy in their great love. Some seem to enjoy the "pleasures of the chase," and when the girl is won they lose interest. If that is the way with your boy friend, don't try to hold him. You would never be happy if you married him. Unless you enjoy the sensation of bounding from one stage to keep his attention you would be very miserable.

Peter's Adventure

By MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

NO ROOM FOR ONE MORE

Dove alighted in a branch of a tall tree and Peter slipped off his back and stood beside him.

All about them were perching companions of the first section, and more and more pigeons kept arriving every moment.

"Here come the fellows who were in the second squadron, the one right behind us," cried Dove and from the throats of all the first arrivals arose a confused cooing: "Here they come! Here they come!" and all the Doves already arrived, flapped their wings in greeting.

But those were the last words that the boy heard for some time—all was now confusion. The birds were entering the Great Woods by the hundreds and hundreds, and the beating of their wings as they rushed by was very much like the wind when it minded half angry because it is shut out of the house on a winter's night and tries to force its way down the chimney.

Peter had to cling fast to his perch too, or he would have been knocked to the ground. It was only by squeezing himself close to the branch that he missed being beaten by their pinions. After he had been struck once or twice by stiff tailfeathers he decided this was the only way to protect himself.

By and by the branches began to be so crowded with pigeons that there and there a branch, unable to stand the strain of its feathered burden, gave way and went crashing to the ground. Peter could no longer make out the outlines of the limbs about him. Pigeons, pigeons everywhere, and so thick that it began to look as if they were really growing on the trees!

Already upon the same branch to which the boy was clinging there were more birds than it had room for, and the latest arrivals tried to get those already perched there to make room for them by pushing and shoving them out of the way. Finally the boy felt himself being jammed against the rough trunk of the tree.

"Good gracious; this is terrible!" gasped he, trying to push

HE HAD TO CLING FAST TO HIS PERCH.

Dove away, for his good friend was altogether too close for comfort. "Can't you stand back a little and give me more room? In a minute I shall be crushed, I am sure. And even if I do manage not to get any bones broken I shall be smothered to death, and

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

OUR TEACHER—Thus saith the Lord, thy Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel; I am the Lord thy God which teacheth thee to profit, which leadeth thee by the way that thou shouldest go.—Isa. 48:17.

HOOVER AND EUROPEAN PROPAGANDA

President-elect Hoover on his friendship visit to South America will find that the United States must solve two problems to reclaim the friendship of the Latin nations. They are: First—European propaganda, particularly that of Spain, Italy and England, which has fostered a distrust of the United States in South America in order to win the Latin American trade.

Second—The Latin suspicion of all our diplomatic moves, based on the fact that, being a talkative and excitable people, they cannot accept as frankness our taciturn approach to international problems.

This is the situation as it is pictured in the North American Review by Dr. L. L. Bernard, distinguished sociologist of Cornell university, recently returned from a year's first-hand study of the southern continent and its people.

"The most pessimistic fears of the South Americans regarding us find much encouragement from European propagandists of all nations," says Dr. Bernard. "Some of their jealousy and envy of our growth and power is native, but I believe much more of it has been skillfully fostered by the Europeans."

Spain naturally holds South American interest and sympathy through the blood-tie, he points out. But Italy, with its present heavy flow of emigrants into the southern continent, and England, with a heavy investment in commerce and industry, are taking advantage of every opportunity to strengthen their own trade relations by discrediting the United States in subtle ways, he says.

The recent appeal of Mussolini for the South Americans to look to the Latin nations of Europe as their natural protectors is an excellent illustration of how little pleasure he and his people take in the Monroe Doctrine.

One of our greatest possible diplomatic assets in Latin America would be to explain carefully to the world every political step we take in intra-American affairs. The Latins simply do not understand silence, it disconcerts them and arouses their suspicions.

When the United States government feels that its policies in Central America and elsewhere are justified by necessity, it would do well to state its reasons meticulously. The Latins are fundamentally a very frank people. If we speak out frankly about our motives and if the speech has the ring of truth, there should be little to fear.

WHY BLAME THE CAT?

In the good old days when grandma and grandpa were young, it was considered an ill-omen to have a black cat cross one's path. Doubtless many of the dear old folk would exclaim, "I told you so," if they heard the story of John Coffey, reported from Muskogee, Okla.

Apparently the black cat of this tale crossed Farmer Coffey's path at a very inopportune moment. The farmer, in attempting to light his pipe, broke the match, which dropped into a kerosene can. An unfortunate accident for the cat. The explosion that came instantaneously ignited the poor feline and it scampers frantically for the barn, where it was consumed by flames along with the building and the hay stored in it.

"A black cat—I told you so," . . . yes, but why blame it on the cat? Why have an open can of kerosene standing about and why light a match near such a can? Common sense dictates that all inflammable and explosive liquids should be kept in tightly closed metal containers and in a safe place. The black cat from his happy hunting grounds knows they are dangerous, and The National Board of Fire Underwriters supplies figures showing that the annual fire loss from careless handling of petroleum and its products was over $14,000,000 in 1926.

The Way of the World

By GROVE PATTERSON

THE GOOD OLD DAYS

You have heard of the man who wants all automobiles demolished. He longs for the horse and buggy days.

Poor fellow. He forgets the horse and buggy era was the time of 12 and 13-hour schedules for factory employees, working seven days a week. He forgets that machine production is shortening the working day.

CAN'T PREDICT

No one knows how short the working day will become. A Chicagoan thinks many of us will live to see a three-hour period of daily toil. That seems impossible, but who dare say it is? Yesterday's impossibilities are today's realities.

FREE TIME

With more leisure will come greater opportunity for individual improvement. There should be time for those who aspire to write to study and practice. Time for those who admire musical talent to develop themselves. Time for more of us to help our handicapped friends.

AHEAD

When ancient Athens was in flower some of the Athenians produced great works of art. But well rounded lives were lacking. The upper classes had no genuine interest in the workingman, save as a slave. Philanthropy was starved.

Greater things are ahead of the world than any of the seven wonders of the past. And the machine will be the instrument of achievement.

PERSONALITY'S WORTH

The man with the strong and attractive personality is the one who gets ahead in the engineering profession. A survey by an engineering society shows that technical knowledge plays a fifteen per cent role in success. The other eighty-five per cent is due to personality.

Then how develop personality? Well, how do you think?

The Diary

of a

New Yorker

By WALTER WINCHELL

NEW YORK.—A column or so ago Charles Wagner, poet, contributed a verse called "Subway Flirtation," in which he told of a charmer with whom he flirted under ground, and wondered if she would see the poem here—and if she did he would be happy. He was too shy to speak with her, it seems, although "she gave me the sign," ran a line.

Well, this is to urge Mr. Wagner to call for his pash mail, which is cluttering up this virgin desk, or better still, we wish he would immediately forward a self-addressed envelope for several women have made reply, urging us to forward their missives to Mr. Wagner, who, it appears, is their weakness now.

THEORY

To hear some of the so-called wisenheimers table-talk it with the passing of the gambler, Arnold Rothstein, who was spectacularly shot, the gaming houses in New York will perish. "He was the heart of the racket," said one Mainstemmer. "Who else is going to put up the big bait? When he went, so went the big dough."

But that's just so much whoopee. Gambling will continue, probably, on just as big a scale. There is always "new" money to be had, and, of course, there is always another Wallingford on the scene who thinks he knows "all the answers."

THE BIG OPTIMIST!

Somewhere she waits, strong in belief,
Your soul in her firm white hands.
Thank well the gods when she comes to you—
The Woman Who Understands
—Everad J. Appleton, via R.

INCIDENTALLY

Arnold Rothstein's trouble of hounding his creditors to come across when they broke their promises again is being discussed. "When a guy would say that Rothstein had summoned him to his office, where we all know you went through hell listening to him grumble, we always would say: 'Oh! So you're going up to sit in the electric chair, eh?'"

Such little things will break our hearts.
An angry word, a kiss denied,
A door slammed loudly and our dreams

I broke my heart because you spoke
Of love and lovers, bitterly.
Because you laughed to scorn my dreams
Of ecstasy.

Ah, well my heart is mended now
The bits are held with tape and glue
You'll never guess that once I cried
All night for you. . . .
—Mimi Phillips.

SLANGUAGE

We only share the expression yesterday. Maybe we haven't been around much. However, when a guy's "hat is blown off" it is underworded for scaring him. The handbill, in fewer words, who want to frighten an enemy or take him for a sort of a "ride," chirp: "Let's blow his hat off." The victim is trailed, and just when he least expects it his hat (most times) is knocked from his dome, and when he picks the lid up, he discovers the bullet hole. Then if he doesn't drop dead from heart failure he worries himself to a yawning grave.
Nice, no?

TEAM WORK

"Boy, what kinda seegar is dat you is smoking?"
"Nigger, dat's a quarter seegar."
"Quarter nothing. You never pay no two bits for a seegar."
"I didn't say nothing about dat. De boss he smokes three-quarters and I smoke a quarter."

LET HIM LOOSE

He was one of the fire-and-brimstone type, and he was giving the audience a few home truths. "Yes, my friends," he said, "although you are all above sin, each one of you must beware of the Demon. The Demon is chained to the wall, waiting to jump out and catch you. If you give him the slightest chance he'll stretch out his hand in front and grab you! Or he'll stretch out to the right and grab you! Or he'll stretch out to the left and grab you! And he'll even stretch out behind and grab you." This was a little too much for a man seated in the middle row of seats, and rising to his feet he shouted: "Well, the thing might as well be loose."

SHARP RETORT

It was a very hot day and the guide in the crowded bus had just about reached the end of his tether. But he had his living to earn. Suddenly he noticed they were passing a newly erected monument. "On your right," he shouted, pointing with his arm, "on your right you see a statue unveiled last week to a noble cause." "And what does it stand for?" asked a trouble-some old gentleman. "Because it would look silly lying down," snapped the guide.

I often think that a good deal of courage to make a second venture, especially where there are children.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am only 30 now, and for nine years I have been married to a man that I have come to hate because of his inhuman treatment of my little son by my former marriage. We have a son who is eight years old, and his father has spoiled him so that no one likes him, while the older boy is so mistreated that he is ready to cry at every little thing. Then, too, my husband's manner makes my home a living hell from his bossing, and has taken over the complete management of everything. I work in our office every day and receive nothing for it. I haven't even a comfortable place to rest when I get home at night. Now, Mrs. Lee, I am a home-loving person and would give anything for a nice little home where I could have harmony. I love art and all the things that go to make a real home. I often wonder why people who crave such things, so can't have just a few of them. I have tried to get employment in other offices, but my husband is so well known that they all tell me that I don't need to work and won't hire me. I am getting desperate and must do something soon. Can you not suggest something?"

"Had Loner," I read your letter and surely felt sorry for you. But you must take heart, for surely you will meet someone some day who will appreciate you. SMILING."

Could you manage to send your older boy better to school? It would be much better for him than to stay where there is misunderstanding and ill-treatment. Then, too, it would move one source of jealousy out of the home. No woman likes to turn over the management of her home to anyone, no matter how competent. You should certainly be paid for your work at the office, if the business justifies it, or at least have some chance to handle money of that you could have some of the things you yearn for. I cannot advise you to leave home, as then your younger boy might be utterly spoiled. All I can say is that for your sake try to get along with a little friction as possible, and things may work better in the future. I hope so. It's a long lane that has no turning, you know.

A Reader Brown Eyes: Your fiancé is a bit old for you, but not too old if you love one another. If he shows signs of loving you less, however, why would you want to hold him? Some men—most—are just as sincere in their love as women, and happy in their girls' love. Some few seem to enjoy the pleasures of the chase, and when the girl is won they lose interest. If that is the way with your boy friend, don't try to hold him. You would never be happy if you married him. Unless you enjoy the sensation of bounding from crag to crag to keep his attention you would be very miserable.

Peter's Adventure

By MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

NO ROOM FOR ONE MORE

Dove alighted in a branch of a tall tree and stood beside him. All about them were perching companions of the first section, and more and more pigeons kept arriving every moment.

"Here come the fellows who were in the second squadron, the one right behind us," cried Dove and from the throats of all the first arrivals arose a confused cooing: "Here they come! Here they come!" and all the Doves already arrived, flapped their wings in greeting.

But those were the last words that the boy heard for some time—all was now confusion.

The birds were entering the Great Woods by the hundreds and hundreds, and the beating of their wings as they rushed by reminded him of the wind when it is very angry because it is shut out of the house on a winter's night and tries to force its way down the chimney.

Peter had to cling fast to his perch too, or he would have been knocked to the ground. It was only by squeezing himself close to the branch that he missed being beaten by their pinions. After he had been struck once or twice by stiff tailfeathers he decided this was the only way to protect himself.

By and by the branches began to be so crowded with pigeons that here and there a branch, unable to stand the strain of its feathered burden, gave way and went crashing to the ground. Peter could no longer make out the outlines of the limbs above him. Pigeons were everywhere, and so thick that it began to look as if they were really growing on the trees!

Next—"Trouble in Camp," that will be just as bad.

HE HAD TO CLING FAST TO HIS PERCH.

Dove away, for his good friend was altogether too close for comfort.

"Can't you stand back a little and give me more room? In a minute I shall be crushed. I am sure. And even if I do manage not to get any bones broken I shall be smothered to death, and Next—"Trouble in Camp," that will be just as bad."

Cedarville College Books Heavy Court Schedule

YELLOW JACKETS TO FACE CLASSY TEAMS IN COMING SEASON

Cincinnati, Ohio And Kentucky Wesleyan Are Booked

Seventeen games, including seven at home and ten away, have already been arranged for the 1928-29 Cedarville College basketball team with the prospect that at least four more contests will be booked to round out probably the most strenuous season of court competition ever faced by the "Yellow-Jackets."

Such prominent schools as Ohio Wesleyan, St. Xavier, University of Cincinnati, Kentucky Wesleyan, Muskingum and Hanover College of Indiana, appear on the basketball chart for the coming season. In addition to the seventeen contests already booked, Coach R. M. Borst expects to arrange home-and-home games with Wilberforce University and Kent State Normal. This would give Cedarville a twenty-one game schedule with nine home games and twelve on strange floors.

Cedarville will open its season at home December 8 when Antioch College's Division "A" quintet appears for a game. After this contest six games will be played in nine days, including five straight during eight days on a road trip.

Ohio Wesleyan University, one of the leading schools in the Buckeye Conference, will appear at Cedarville December 21. Wesleyan also played at Cedarville last season. Coach Borst has issued his first call for candidates to report for the opening practice next Monday.

With three regular members of last season's strong team again available, the basketball outlook at Cedarville has taken on a bright hue. Roy Smith, center, Bob Jacobs and George Gordon, guards, are the veterans back. It is questionable whether Gordon will be available soon because he broke his hand during the football season.

Don Allen, Belle Center, O., and Albert Turner, Selma, sub-wards last season, seem assured of a regular berth this year. Freshmen prospects are Paul Wright, who played guard with Bellbrook High School, Greene County Class B champions last season, will be out for a regular position. Others expected to show promise are Owen Peters, Cedarville, forward, and Howard Smith, Clarksburg, O., six foot, two-inch center, both freshmen.

Following is the schedule as it now stands:

December 8—Antioch at Cedarville.
December 12—Wilmington at Wilmington.
December 14—St. Xavier at Cincinnati.
December 15—University of Cincinnati at Cincinnati.
December 17—Kentucky Wesleyan at Winchester, Ky.
December 19—Muskingum at New Concord.
December 21—Ohio Wesleyan at Cedarville.
January 10—Rio Grande at Galipolis, O.
January 18—Hanover at Hanover, Ind.
January 19—Bliss Business College at Cedarville.
January 23—Findlay at Findlay.
February 1—Hanover at Cedarville.
February 4—Antioch at Yellow Springs.
February 8—Rio Grande at Cedarville.
February 15—Bliss College at Columbus.
February 19—Wilmington at Cedarville.
February 22—Findlay at Cedarville.

THE MEADOWLARKS—Now That's Different!

PUNTS AND PASSES

The stock of Coach "Pinky" Wilson's Central High Buccaneers tool, a big jump Saturday when it became known that Withrow High, Cincinnati, had romped to an easy 41 to 6 victory over Cincinnati Hughes Friday to win the Cincinnati Scholastic League championship for the second straight year.

This is important only because Xenia held Withrow to a scoreless tie at Cincinnati October 19 and threw a terrible scare into the ranks of Withrow's followers. Xenia was inside the five yard-line once and should have won the game.

Since the wide margin of Withrow's victory Friday indicated the unquestioned superiority of that team in Cincinnati grid circles, the scoreless tie played with Xenia proves not only the class of the Buccaneers, but the class of the Miami Valley League in which Xenia was a runner-up. It is another proof of the claim that baseball-mad Cincinnati doesn't take its football so seriously. Much better scholastic football is played in the Miami Valley and it wasn't for the good showing of St. Xavier's Musketeers that would go for collegiate football as well.

Wilmington College scored three touchdowns in the last half to break a scoreless tie and beat Salem College 19 to 0 at Wilmington Friday. Wilmington even surprised itself by completely outplaying the West Virginians' team, permitting only seven first downs, four of which were earned.

Wilmington High School's defeat at the hands of the Buccaneers Thursday was the last game of the season for the Quakers, during which they captured six victories and accepted four defeats in a ten-game season. It closed Johnny Nowald's third season as coach of the team. His first team, in 1925, he inherited from former Coach Roy Black and it was his best, although defeated by Xenia Central. His team last year was weak and the better showing made this year is considered as an improvement. Wilmington played Xenia Thursday minus the services of Bolser and Rose, both backfield regulars, which may have weakened the team's attack. Xenia also played without its flashy half, Birch Bell, who was on the sidelines with an injured hand received in the Sidney game. The injury is better but Wilson wanted to save Bell for the more important Thanksgiving Day battle with Springfield.

Yale and Harvard are about to play for the championship of New Haven. Or is it Cambridge?

COVINGTON HIGH DEFEATS EAST GRIDDRS IN FRIDAY TUSSLE

William Grant High School, Covington, Ky., defeated East High School gridriders 13 to 0 Friday afternoon at Cox Memorial Athletic Field.

Covington's first touchdown came in the opening quarter when Fullback William Lewis blocked an East punt, recovered the ball and ran over the goal line. Try for extra point failed.

The visitors scored again in the third period as the climax of a parade down the gridiron from midfield. A sub fullback went over for the score. Goal was kicked from placement for the added point.

East High muffed two golden opportunities to score because of lack of punch when it was most needed. East penetrated to the four-yard-line in the first quarter, but four line plays were unavailing. Again in the third period East advanced as far as the eight-yard-stripe where a pass went in to the end zone.

East's record this season includes two victories, two defeats and three tie games. East's defeat Friday was the first suffered in a home game this year.

It is probably East will close its season by playing the Alumni, possibly next Saturday.

There is still time for Xenia fans to send in their selections for the Real All-American football team, truly representative of the sentiment of the entire country, which is to be selected this week.

It will be chosen by the readers of The Gazette and the hundreds of other newspaper clients of the Central Press Association, which is conducting its third annual poll. It will be picked by the fans.

It is generally conceded that the task of selecting an All-American football eleven worthy of that title is too much of a job for one man, or a group of men.

One man cannot attend all of the important football games of the season. He cannot compare honestly and fairly the merits of the various players without seeing them in action.

The country's gridiron fans CAN select an All-American football team that is worthy of that name. Remember, fans, the All-American team selected by one man must of necessity be made up largely by guesswork. The team that you and the other fans of the country will pick will be of REAL All-American caliber.

The deadline for receipt of selections is Sunday, November 25. Fill out the ballot on this page and mail it out. Send your selections to the Sports Editor of The Gazette.

These historic trophies are at stake in Saturday's grid contests. Right, the "old oaken bucket," which will go to the winner of Purdue-Indiana game, and, left, "Illibuck," over which Illinois and Ohio will battle.

FINISH OF CORN BORER THOUGHT NEAR

Development Of Hybrid Plant, Immune To European Invader, May Halt Spread Of Pest Scientists Hope.

TOLEDO, O., Nov. 24.—A hybrid corn plant being developed here on the government experimental farm may be the means of halting the steady spread of the European corn borer throughout the nation. Already the pest has cost Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Pennsylvania and New York millions of dollars and the government has spent more than $20,000,000 in the last two years to halt its encroachment into the middle west corn belt.

More than 300 scientists and agriculturists from all parts of the world, attending the fourth annual conference here of the International Corn Borer association, viewed the hybrid corn plant which is almost immune to the borer which is infesting more than 83 per cent of the stalks in many Ohio fields.

The hybrid is called Maize de Cuyt and is the result of the crossing of an American corn with a Mexican maize called tocoste, which maize is immune to the borer because the plant is too small to attack when the borer moths are laying their eggs. The hybrid grown in a field here beside other varieties of corn which show infestation as high as 52 per cent itself shows only 6 per cent infestation.

Farm leaders from every corn-growing state in the union have been attending the conference to devise plans of saving America's corn crop from the pest which entered from Canada only a few years ago and was first found near this city.

The government is growing the 139 known varieties of American corn in one large field here to see which varieties are less susceptible to attacks by the borer. The first year the hybrid was grown only six kernels reached maturity in the entire two rows of plants. The season seemed too short for the plant to mature before frost.

The next spring only two of the kernels grew and the hopes of the government workers waned. However, the two plants produced good ears and now several bushels of seed will be obtained this fall to be planted next spring. The percentage of infestation is expected to be zero in 1929.

Yellow Dent from Idaho, 52; Golden Harvest from Illinois, 42; Hayes Golden from Kansas, 18; Silver King from Illinois, 12; Reid's Yellow Dent from Ohio, 4; Big Golden from Michigan, 2; Dawson from Iowa, 1; Reid's Yellow Dent from Missouri, 8, and varieties from other states varied from 6 to 40 per cent.

The tests showed that a corn which matures late is less likely to be destroyed by the borer. Copper seedlings of an acre are each are used to keep the borer moths from leaving the acre.

At another government farm near here parasites are being raised by the millions to be turned loose in the nation's corn field to devour the borer inside the stalks. A stinging wasp appears to be the greatest possibility. It was imported from Italy.

The parasites and the hybrid corn plant are being developed under the direction of L. H. Werth, federal administrator of control measures for all infested states. The new plant has been inspected by both Dr. A. P. Wood, director of scientific research of the Department of Agriculture, and Dr. C. L. Marlatt, chief of the bureau of entomology and plant quarantine.

corn fields and so accurate counts can be made of the infestation in each plot.

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 24.—Paul Whiteman, the stout bandmaster, will come to Hollywood next February to make a sound picture best described by its title "The King of Jazz." Whiteman will bring his entire band west for the production, a feature length all "talkie" now in preparation at the Universal studios.

There will be a strong romantic theme with Whiteman in the role of an ambitious young musician whose success results from a song written to the girl he loves.

The youth will be presented as responsible for the introduction of jazz and his increasing fame from the early days of Alexander's Ragtime band to the present stage of jazz will be shown.

The supporting cast has not yet been chosen, but it is expected to be in keeping with the size of the production, which probably is Universal's most progressive step so far in the sound picture field.

John Barrymore's ambition to play in a screen version of Hamlet apparently has been sidetracked again.

Warner Brothers have announced that under the contract he signed with them Barrymore's first vehicle will be "The Tavern Knight," by Rafael Sabatini.

Work on "The Tavern Knight," a 100 per cent talking picture, will be started after January 1.

Louis Wolheim, the hard-looking screen villain, attributes his success to a college education. He broke his nose while playing football for Cornell university in 1906.

Screen kisses must be silent to gain the best effect in talking pictures, according to Lew Kolb, electrical engineer for the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios.

"The equipment records the slightest sound and silent kisses do away with any difficulty," he said. "Real experts such as John Gilbert, Greta Garbo, Nils Asther and Joan Crawford usually kiss silently anyhow—the result of picture training. Newcomers from the stage usually try to put all the sound they can into it. We have to teach 'em to pipe down on their kisses as a result."

On the subject of the "talkies," Alfred Santell, director, says they will govern screen styles. "The fact that sound apparatus is so sensitive to the slightest rustle will make it necessary to create all gowns of soft, clinging materials."

"Motion picture actresses do much to set the styles and it appears that the dressmakers who have made popular the stiff-bouffant skirt now in vogue will suffer reverses next season."

READ THIS FIRST:
Several disturbing elements had already entered the life of Byrd Hamilton, who had just married the arrogant irresistible Larry Browning. They were spending the night at the Blackstone at Cincinnati, where Larry's friends, who had come to attend their wedding, were giving a party in their honor. When the party had reached a high pitch in the crowded rooms, Byrd found that this fast-moving crowd had no interest for her. When she discovered India Campbell, a former sweetheart of Larry's and Larry sitting dangerously on a window sill before an open window, they misinterpreted her anxiety as jealousy. Humiliated, she left the party and returned to their rooms. She dropped off to sleep, conscious that an occasion was being celebrated but she had no part in it. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER VI
When Byrd awoke the next morning, the sun was pouring in through the windows with a mid-day brilliance. The bright light in her eyes seemed to clear her brain and sweep away the cobwebs that last night's orgy had left there.

She sat straight up, looking quickly at the other bed. It had not been slept in! "The cat's whiskers!" she said, slowly, under her breath. "Now, where do you suppose Larry spent the night?"

She hopped quickly out of bed, but feeling rather queer, sat down on the edge of it. In her shell-pink pajamas, with bands of rose in which roses of a deeper color were floating, she looked like some exotic flower. As transparent and beautiful as a magnolia petal.

She suddenly remembered the scene with Larry, and the humiliation she had suffered at his hands. She moved over to the big, upholstered chair in the parlor, and sat frowning. Whenever she moved about, she had a funny feeling at the pit of her stomach. —And her head still felt as if it wasn't securely fastened, and might float away most any time. "Where can Larry be?" The thought came back again and again, each time pricking her with a sharper point of worry and a strange, uneasy feeling crept over her which might have been merely her stomach or a slowly-forming sense of hurt.

She didn't know which. She would not become hysterical about it, she vowed, brushing away a tear from each eye, until she knew what had happened to him. During the night, Byrd told herself, events become more hideous. Fears and suspicions rush through the corridors of the mind like angry and vicious animals, taking on an importance that is out of all proportion to their causes.

But even in the bright daylight the thing looked queer. She went to her dresser, looked at her wristwatch, and saw that it was eleven o'clock. Her resentment was mounting now. Wherever Larry was, he had had enough sleep by this time, so that he should have been awake and telephoned her. It showed that he hadn't the least regard for her. She felt terribly neglected.

The tears, openly invited now, began to work themselves like mountain torrents, from under her closed eyes. She gave herself up unreservedly to a good cry. Then she heard a hand on the doorknob, and Larry's voice at the door. She hurried to the door, opened it, and there he stood, leaning against the door, who, tired and worn looking, was doing his best to support him.

Suddenly all her resentment passed, like sunlight dissolving a dark and threatening cloud, and if Byrd hadn't been so ill herself, she might have been moved to laughter. For Larry was a comical and pathetic sight.

He looked like a schoolboy caught in some mischief. His clothes were wrinkled, his collar and tie were gone, his hair was rumpled and a gray collar over his face reminded her of a coating of mold on decaying fruit. Without a word, Chet thrust him inside the door and left.

Byrd threw her arms around Larry and poured a fresh torrent of tears all over him. But she was not crying from anger, as Larry thought.

Just that emotion common to all women when they have their hands back safely in their arms after a somewhat precarious adventure, was enough to change her mood. If Larry had walked in jauntily, debonairly, in his usual fashion, she would have had an attack of hysteria.

So, for that inexplicable reason, her heart warmed toward him. All her maternal, brooding love for him was stirred by his plight.

"Larry," she exclaimed, "where in the world have you been?" "I only wish I knew," he tried to flash his old-time, conciliatory smile, but it was only a sickly imitation of it. "Help me get into bed."

Larry staggered toward the bathroom. "I feel as if the room's swinging around, and I'm afraid the floor's going to rise up and smack me on the back of the head."

He sank into a chair, groaning and holding his head. "Godalmighty, what a headache!" Byrd stood above him helplessly, looking down at him with her eyes brimming with sympathy. She just knew that Larry wouldn't have done such a thing as drink all night if these people hadn't invited him into attending their party.

"Godalmighty, never again for me. I hope this'll teach me a lesson." He looked at Byrd with penitent eyes.

"I'm sorry about the whole thing. Can you ever forgive me, darling?" Byrd was sitting on the arm of the big chair, and Larry put his arms around her weakly, lowering his head to her breast.

The very last shreds of resentment were swept away at Larry's contrition. Byrd twittered over him, patted him and smothered him with her kisses. He started again for the bathroom, and negotiated the trip with Byrd's help.

"I'm going to join the Salvation Army and work for prohibition," he laughed, painfully. "Get out my pajamas, dear, will you? Toss them into the bathroom. Lay out my dressing gown, too."

While Byrd was digging through his bag, she was amazed to find an entire outfit of gold-topped things, all marked fourteen karat gold, military brushes and clothes brushes, and even a tiny shoe brush, a little glass flask with four little gold cups fitting into each other, and all fitting over the stopper.

Shirts made of the heaviest Shantung silk, with marvelous initials embroidered in contrasting shades, made by the most famous Japanese haberdasher on Fifth Avenue. Handkerchiefs of sheerest linen, thin as cobwebs, with out-work initials. As she lifted the dressing gown it rustled with its heavy brocade lining.

Two parallel lines appeared between her eyebrows like startled exclamation points. Byrd knew that Larry was on a quite modest salary, with the expectation of being taken into the firm at the beginning of the year. Well, perhaps he had spread himself on his wedding outfit, just as she had on hers.

Suddenly her own little trunk, which had been sent on to White Sulphur Springs, filled with silk underthings which she and her mother had themselves made, pajamas cut from paper patterns, two cunning kimono and breakfast jackets copied right out of "Vogue" seemed out-of-date at once, and everything in it had become in her eyes tawdry and home-made.

The evening dresses, the street gowns with hats to match, which she and her mother had so diligently shopped for, seemed drab in comparison to the clothes the women had worn last night.

They seemed all now to leave a wry taste in her mouth. She ran the rosy tip of her tongue against her lips experimentally. Well, something had put a wry taste in her mouth!

"Run down to the drug store and get me some bromo seltzer, will you, dear?" asked Larry, weakly. As Byrd leaned over him, placing a cold towel over his burning forehead, he observed her pale face for the first time.

"You've forgotten all about your breakfast, honeybunch. Call for room service and ask them to have some breakfast here by the time you get back. Gee-gosh, I could swear some beautiful ones right now. To think you've got to eat your breakfast alone."

"Never mind, dear," said Byrd, lazily, "we've got the rest of our lives to breakfast together. Now we can look forward to tomorrow's breakfast."

She dipped the towel, which was already steaming, again into icy water, and and crept quietly from the apartment.

Larry dropped off to sleep immediately after taking the contents of the bottle, as directed. Byrd sat down alone to the tray which had been left on the table. But she hardly touched any of it. Even the fruit had a queer, unpleasant taste, and the coffee was positively nauseating. She was sorry she had ordered breakfast. Hotel meals were expensive, especially served in rooms.

Byrd crawled back into bed to try to get a little more sleep. She awoke about three o'clock in the afternoon, feeling much better. Larry was still sleeping soundly. With as little noise as possible, she bathed and dressed.

Byrd seemed to be following out a plan which must have been forming in her mind while she slept. Something told her she would have to go to the department store across the street from the hotel and get some clothes.

"Twenty-four hours ago she would have staked her wardrobe against that of any New York debutante, and now, over night, it had suddenly become queer and inadequate for even a week's stay at White Sulphur Springs.

She found Larry's billbook sticking out of his hip pocket in the way billbooks have a habit of sticking. She was amazed to find several hundred dollars lying loosely between the folds. My, thought Byrd, what a careless way of carrying money!

Two hours later she was back with two suitboxes under one arm and a hatbox under the other. She placed the boxes on the floor while she slipped the key into the lock.

Suddenly she heard voices and laughter inside. She drew back, thinking she had the wrong room or the wrong floor. But there, above her, was the correct number. (TO BE CONTINUED)

LECTURE ON INDIAN LORE AT ANTIOCH

An entertaining lecture on Indian lore formed the subject of an address Friday morning at the Antioch College assembly by Miss Mabel Powers, an adopted member of the Seneca tribe of the Iroquois Indians and the author of several books on Indian folklore.

"The Indians have held in trust the soul of America while we have wandered among the material things," Miss Powers said. "This race represents the only true epic of culture America has ever seen." The speaker added. Miss Powers pictured the school of the woods in which Indian braves were educated and gave examples of what bearing this education had on their traits and characters.
